International 22q11.2 Foundation Healthcare Champion Scholarship Application

The International 22q11.2 Foundation is expanding our reach by establishing a first of its kind academic scholarship to support doctoral medical education for an individual who has demonstrated exceptional interest in understanding chromosome 22q11.2 differences through direct patient care, research initiatives, and dedication to service.

Rationale

Chromosome 22q11.2 differences are common but most medical schools and graduate programs are unaware. To counter this, we plan to advance the medical communities understanding one doctor-in-training at a time, allowing the student to share existing knowledge with classmates and educators while ultimately graduating 22q experts into the broader healthcare community.

Qualifications

- Current admission to a doctoral program (MD, DO or PhD)
- History of 22q11.2 direct patient care
- Published research related to chromosome 22q11.2 differences
- Recognition of excellence by the international scientific community
- Dedication to 22q11.2 related service
- Passionate, driven, and ready to make a difference
